

NO SECURITIES

"Americans" Have Practi-

Bankers with German connections were positive yesterday that no American securities were on the submarine-freighter at Baltimore. This was not only because the manifest showed none, but because the opinion that the large majority of this country's stocks and bonds held in Germany had been sold either before the war or soon after.

It was also believed that Germany would not risk shipping any great amount of securities on the maiden trip of her undersea merchant craft. The point was also made that rather than subject millions in stocks and bonds to risk of capture by the British, those securities would be burned in Berlin or some other important German city in the presence of American officials and new securities issued here in their place. This has been done, the bankers said, in the case of the Reichmark.

The effect was seen in the market for exchange on Berlin, due to the arrival of the submarine. Reichmark checks advanced above 75, against 60, and the closing quotation for the 1-16, 100 Reichmarks, was 11-16.

The purely sentimental, in the opinion of foreign exchange circles. If Germany is able to establish a permanent trade route to America the securities likely to result in a further drop in the value of the mark.

"Shipping dyestuffs and chemicals to American manufacturers would be only a minor part of the great advantage that Germany needs," said a banker who has been instrumental in floating German loans in this country. On the return trip from Germany, the cargo of raw materials would probably be loaded with a big tonnage of rubber, for Germany is sadly in need of that for its gloves for surgeons. It is not for nothing that the Germans are so anxious to get the rubber from the Congo.

The market will continue to rise. On the other hand, it is likely that further weakness will develop on actual heavy shipments to Germany."

Shock of Thunder Fatal.

Newton, N. J., July 10.—Mrs. Mamie Louise McCracken, of Woodside Avenue, swooned last night when a tremendous clap of thunder shook her house. She died early this morning. All her life Mrs. McCracken had dreaded thunderstorms.
